

Update 7

South Bay Under Tropical Storm Warning as Dorian Nears Florida Coast

Dorian is currently a Category 3 hurricane moving west at 2 mile per hour. While the projected track keeps the storm just off the Florida coast, South Bay Emergency Officials are monitoring for any forecast changes.

The City remains under a Tropical Storm Warning, which means we can expect to see winds up to 73 miles per hour Tuesday afternoon into Tuesday evening. We urge residents to remain vigilant and indoors while monitoring local media updates.

Key Messages from the National Weather Service Advisory:

- The main rain bands from Dorian are still offshore.
- A few broken bands with gusty winds near Tropical Storm force are moving onshore Monday.
- Additional bands could develop later this afternoon and into the evening, with gusts to Tropical Storm force.
- A general increase in Tropical Storm force wind in rain bands later tonight, mainly east.
- There is the possibility of destructive and life-threatening winds/wind damage.
- Potential for flooding of low lying and vulnerable areas.

The canals and Lake level are well below normal levels; we are in good condition and prepared for the predicted rain.
